

Planning Your Next Move?

A seminar designed to help you maximise your business sale value.

27 March 2012
Manchester Airport
Marriott Hotel

“You only sell or pass on your business once – it is too important an issue not to prepare for. You cannot begin to think about it too early.”

Many business owners work extremely hard over the years to build a profitable, healthy business but neglect planning for the eventual exit. Even if you have no immediate plans to transfer or sell your business, failing to plan for the future could cost you thousands.

Cowgill Holloway has developed a valuable seminar to bring together like-minded people and have your questions answered by our corporate finance, tax and wealth management experts.

What will you gain from attending on 27 March 2012?

Designed exclusively for shareholders of privately owned businesses whether considering a sale now or simply planning for the future. It will give you a unique and practical insight based on real-life examples of what needs to be done in evolving and implementing your strategy for exit or succession. We all know the marketplace has been tough over the last eighteen months. Despite this, we at Cowgill Holloway have still been doing some great deals.

There are opportunities out there for the right companies – do not assume that this is not the right time to exploit them.
